Liberty Alliance for Youth Launches New Website

Liberty Alliance for Youth (LAFY) has launched a new, all-inclusive website at libertyalliance4youth.com.

The website includes information on the various programs of the volunteer youth advocacy group, which works with the support of Tri-County Mental Health Services, is dedicated to reducing alcohol, tobacco and other drug abuse and violence to improve the Liberty community.

“We’re excited to give the community easy access to information about LAFY,” program director Kendra Calloway said. “Our volunteers are dedicated to creating a safe environment in which our youth can thrive.”

Calloway said the coalition always extends an open invitation to anyone living or working in the Liberty area to join them at their monthly luncheon meetings. “Our group is composed of parents and residents, as well as members of the education field, social and legal agencies, law enforcement, and the faith community.”

Calloway said by visiting the new web site anyone interested will be able to find out about some of LAFY’s successful programs that have received national acclaim, as well as review a calendar of upcoming meetings, events and programs.

“We designed the website to be user friendly, so anyone can easily navigate it,” Calloway said.
